Dear Milca:

Thank you so much for the follow up letter. Santa was a little busy, so he asked if I could respond to your recent requests. First, I want to thank you for saying that I'm your favorite reindeer. I won't share that with the others as they may get upset and poop on your dad's roof if they knew. They tend to be a little jealous since I get so much attention.

As for my nose, the television shows that show a blinking red light on the end of my snout are greatly exaggerated. It is more of a pinkish shade than it is red, and it definitely does not blink on and off or light up. It's just a standard reindeer nose with a pink tint to it. Unfortunately, you can't really tell from the enclosed picture. I'm the one in front of Santa with my nose in the ground.

Thank you for all of the great gift ideas. The elves generally build their own toys. There is no HH Gregg or American Girl Doll store up here at the North Pole. Actually, there really isn't any place to shop other than the Walmart where we have our pictures developed. Chemistry sets are pretty common with boys your age, so the Elves can likely pull some chemicals off the shelf and put them together in a nice case with some beakers. If you do get one, you'll have to promise Santa that you won't blow up your mom's house. The candy and rubber bands are also a pretty easy item for the Elves to find. I can't say for sure because I don't want to spoil your surprise, but I didn't see anything on your list that we can't handle. Don't be disappointed if you don't get everything though. There are a lot of boys and girls out there. If I had to pull a sled with everything they all ask for, I would need a lot more reindeer friends than Santa can feed.

Love Rudolph,

p.s. Santa and Mrs. Clause really enjoyed the picture you sent in your soccer uniform. It is sitting on their mantle next to all of the tiny elf stockings.
